

Creating a happy atmosphere through play

Friends and family are all gathered around. The meal is finished. What do you feel like doing now? Staying seated or getting up? Guessing or knowing?

"This or that?" is a simple game for large or small groups. Will you assess each other correctly or will the game reveal completely new sides of the person opposite you? Interesting table conversations are guaranteed.

Before the first game:

download the playing cards, print them, and cut them out.

This is how you play:

Hold the pile of cards in your hand and ask the person to your left five questions: After that, the next person does the same, and then the next one, right around the table. Important: The answers should be very spontaneous. You can always still think about and discuss them later.

It gets even more interesting when one person's answer is guessed by the others beforehand. Deal a decision card (A, B) to all players. Once the answer is given, you compare who knows whom and how well.
